THE COAL TRUST.

Organization of the Greatest Combine in the United States.

Philadelphia, Feb. 10.—The negotia tions that for some time have been in progress, designed to place the coal pro-ducing and carrying interests upon a more stable foundation, have been completed. The primary object in view has been to seducing and carrying interests upon a more stable foundation, have been completed. The primary object in view has been to secure more economical management in the coal trade by avoiding expensive selling agencies and heavy commissions, so that the coal producers and carriers can get better results and scource profits by saving expenses. The combinations and complex agreements heretofore made have been generally found to be inadequate to accomplish the object sought, as the binding force was insufficient. There has now been carried mito practical effect a plan formed by President McLeod, which embraces the most extensive financial enterprise yet undertailed in this country, and which he thus briefly outlines. The voting trust now helding the stock of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad will shortly expire, and the control of the stock of that company has passed already into hands that are friendly to the Reading management. The Reading railroad, which is under Reading railroad, which is under Reading management has, by lease, accourse control of the Lehigh Valley railroad. A corporation in New Jersey, the Port Reading railroad, which is under Reading management has, by lease, accourse control of the Central railroad of New Jersey. This practically places in the Reading company's hands the conduct of affairs of the Reading, the Lehigh Vailey and the New Jersey Central railroads, and also (through the latter) the Lehigh and Susquehanna railway and the Lehigh Navigation company.

The great benefits of the new arrangement are obvious. In addition to the Reading terminal now constructing in Philadelphia, the Reading will acquire the magnificent terminals of the Lehigh Valley's western extension there will be provided a direct route to the lakes at Buffaio, with a spacious ferminal there. In the carrying on of the coal traile the saving in commissions, agenty fees and economies of traffic inder the new arrangements of the ferminals of dol

SPANISH ANARCHISTS GARROTED.

MADKID, Feb. 10.—The four Anarchists condemned by the court markial at Xeres were garroted this morning. The men were denied the privilege of a trial by the ordinary courts, and the authorities feared that an attempt to rescue them would be made by the lawless element. Extra guards were placed about the prison and the military was also held in readiness for any contingency that might arise. Notwithstanding the fact that many threats were made, these preparations had the effect of awing the active Anarchists and their sympathizers, and the result was that the executions passed off without the slightest attempt at a disturbance. The platform on which the men were garroted was surrounded by detachments of infantry and civil guards, and the route from the jail to the platform was lined with soldiers with loaded rilles. [Special Correspondence.] JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 25.-The only brother of Horace Greeley lives a quiet life on the old Greeley farm in Chantauqua county, near Jamestown. If you drive back over the great hills, even to the edge of Pennsylvania, along a desolate country road, you will come to a typical farmhouse of orthodox architectus standing well back from the highway, shaded by maple, apple and pear trees. As you drive in there is a succession of sharp, short barks and a big black dog, followed by a tall, loosely jointed figure, clad in an old army overcost and hat, come shambling down to meet you.

BARNES GREELEY.

Mr. Greeley has, with his snowy hair and beard, his mild blue eyes and peaceful ex-pression, not only a strong resemblance to his gifted brother, but also to his late charming sister Esther, the wife of Fitch Cleveland, who was one of Horace Greeley's editorial staff on The Tribune.

Barnes Greeley is, and always has been; the ultraccoentric member of the family. Erratic to a degree, he yet is a man who has read and studied all his life and has preferred to exist in this lopely neighbor opportunities as his brother during his lifetime wished to afford him. He loved the country and decided to cast his lot among old neighbors. He has been everything—farmer, teacher, an arbiter of neigh-borhood disputes, spiritual adviser and a daring disputant of the tenets of the orthodox in religion.

The old man loves to tell with many a wink and chuckle how he has gainsaid and put to rout those who have invited him to religious discussions. He is proud of his brother's great record and services, and refers always to him in most affection

"I have to laugh at the people who come here on a pilgrimage to the Greeley home-stend," he said to the writer, "and who undertake to tell me about Hornce's childhood and youth. They forget that I was acquainted with him." Of late years he has not often been in New York, visiting the big city but once to take a look at the bronze statue of the great ed-tior in Park row. "New York dozan's seem like the same place," he said, with gentle pathes, "since Horacs and Fitch

History of Worcestershire Sauce Many years ago Mrs. Grey, author of "The Gambler's Wife," and other novels well known in their day, was on a visit at Ombersley Court, when Lady Sands chanced to remark that she wished she could get some very good curry powder, which elicited from Mrs. Grey that she had in her desk an excellent recipe which her uncle, Sir Charles, chief justice of India, had brought thence and given her. Lady Sands said that there were some clever chemists in Worcester who, perhaps, might be able to make up the powder; at all events, when they drove in after hincheon they would see. One tirm looked at the recipe, doubted if they could procure all the ingredients, but said they would do their best, and in due time forwarded a packet of the powder.

Subsequently the happy thought thirty miles from Grant a Station, in the struck some one in the business that the powder might, in solution, make a good sauce. The experiment was made, and by degrees the thing took amazingly, All the world to its remotest ends now nal prisms of columnar basalt, standing knows of Worcestershire sauce as an up like a church steeple.
